

CURZON TO SUCCEED BELF
London, Oct. 23.—Lord Curzon soon succeed A. J. Balfour as for-secretary, according to a report in ulation today. Mr. Balfour's con-tion with the government will not severed completely, it was stated he will continue in an advisory ca-ity.

TRY THIS PLEASANT AND EFFECTIVE HOME REMEDY FOR COUGHS AND COLDS

IT WORKS LIKE MAGIC AND COSTS BUT LITTLE TO PREPARE

If you want a cough medicine that is surely fine for coughs, colds, hoarseness, bronchial affections, croup and throat irritations, get 3 oz. of Glando Pine (50 cts. worth) with full directions for preparing and you can make a full pint of excellent cough medicine. Glando Pine gets right at the cause of the cough. The first dose relieves, it opens the air cells and makes you breathe easy. Children love to take it. When prepared according to directions it will not separate as some of the inferior cough medicines do.

George Pollock, a painter and decorator, of Logansport, Ind., says, "I took a severe cold which settled all through my system. I had severe pains in my chest and lungs. My throat was swollen and sore. Glando Pine gave me relief almost instantly. I consider it very fine for coughs and colds."

Mrs. John Polter of 359 S. Williams St., Paulding, Ohio, said, "I neglected to doctor a cold which settled on my lungs. My cold grew worse until I coughed almost constantly, I began to spit blood. I lost in weight and looked so bad that people thought I had tuberculosis. I finally tried Glando Pine. The first bottle helped me. I continued its use until I was cured. I firmly believe that Glando Pine saved my life."

To avoid disappointment be sure you get Glando Pine. Once you have used it you will never want to be without it in your home.

Manufactured only by the Gland-Aid Co., Paulding, Ohio.

WILL OF THE LATE G. E. PETERS FILED

An estate, estimated for administration at $650,000 in personality, is disposed of by the will of Gershon Moore Peters, head of the Peters Cartridge Company, who died at his home, 3123 Luray avenue, October 5. The will, which was filed for probate yesterday, gives his entire estate to his widow, Mary King Peters, subject to the stipulation that she is to provide for the reasonable wants of their daughters, Helen P. Wallace and Betty P. Huffman.

If the widow so desires she may divide the estate into three parts, giving each daughter one part and keeping the remainder for herself, but the will admonishes her that if she does this, so to settle it upon them "that they may not be deprived of their property by the uncertainties of business or the schemes of designing people."

Another clause provides for keeping up his charities, as follows: "It is my hope and prayer that so long as my property shall remain in the hands of my wife and children some portion of its income be regularly contributed to those objects of charity and benevolence in which I have been interested and especially that consideration be had for my relatives, who are deserving and needy, so that my work may go on and my wife and children share in its obligations and privileges."

The will was drawn September 15, 1903, and on June 25, 1915, a codicil was added giving $5,000 each to Ella Hurley Mackey and Mary Emily Hurley. His widow is named executrix under the will.

KING AND QUEEN GO THROUGH XENIA WITHOUT STOPPING

Although there was a large crowd on hand at the Pennsylvania depot at 7:30 Wednesday evening, to greet King Albert of Belgium, the Queen, and the rest of the royal party, the train did not stop, and the crowd was awarded with only a glimpse of the Belgian hero.

As the train pulled through the station, the party was at dinner in the dining car, and admirers of the King on the station platform easily distinguished the ruler in his uniform and wearing his decorations. They got only a glimpse however, as the train pulled past. It had stopped at Waynesville to take water.

The observation car and platform on the rear was lighted and the steeple room was decked with flowers, the gifts probably of admiring friends at Cincinnati, where the ruler spent Wednesday. Probably 150 people or more were at the depot to see the royal party.

SAYS "BOOSTS" MUST NOW BE RETURNED

Columbus, O., Oct. 22.—State Auditor Donahey has requested that employees of the state industrial commission, whose salaries were boosted October 1 to return the "boosts" pending action of the state legislature. Donahey stated that the state board of control had decided to postpone any wage increases until after the legislature takes action.

COUNTRY OF ROLLING HILLS

The Drumlins, Between Syracuse and Rochester, N. Y., Make Exquisite Bit of Scenery.

Between Syracuse and Rochester lies a country of hills, known as drumlins, which is one of the most beautiful and unique bits of scenery in the eastern United States.

The term drumlin is an Irish one and is applied to low, rolling hills of glacial origin which exist in that country, and also in parts of New York and New England. This section between Syracuse and Rochester is the very heart of the American drumlins.

Most American mountains and hills were formed by violent disturbances of the earth's surface, and their rugged origin is reflected in their ruggedness. But the drumlins were built by the great ice sheet which once covered all of North America. The materials of which they are made were pushed together slowly by the crawling glaciers molded and tamped and smoothed by the great ice fingers as a child makes mud pies.

The drumlins look as though they had been designed by some great intelligence with a sense of beauty, for they rise in smooth, gentle curves, like those of a perfect human body. They are remarkably uniform in height, usually a little less than 200 feet, and so smooth and lenient are their slopes that many of them are cultivated to their summits. Some of them are as round as half an apple, and others are long wells or rolls.

Scattered among the hills are a number of small lakes and ponds, clear and pretty, and there is good fishing in many of them. The drumlins are a favorite playground of the people in Syracuse, Rochester and other nearby towns, but they are little known beyond the counties in which they lie.

A Tip.

There are two great races—the human race and the horserace—and if you must bet, lay your wager on the human race—it is safer.—Jacksonville (Fla.) Times-Union.

RECLAMATION.

After I had ridden all day through the sand-hill and sage-brush desert of the West, I began to wish for a sight of some civilized farming country but the nearer we got to our destination, the worse it was. The last stretch of the journey was on a spur or a railroad running about twenty-five miles or toward the mountains. On what a country it was! It looked as though the process of creation had stopped before it got that far, and the primeval chaos had been left to rule. Sandstone ridges set at every conceivable angle, clay banks of many colors, streaks of black, gray shale, all water-furrowed and wind-carved; it was worse than a desert—it was absolutely deserted.

Just when it was beginning to make an impression upon me, the train passed through a cut, and swung around the inside. There, stretching out before us, for miles and miles was the finest looking farming country I had ever seen. The farmers were just making their third cutting of alfalfa, and the alfalfa stacks were as thick about the fields as hay-cocks in an Eastern meadow in July. For twelve miles we rode through that delightful country, reaching for miles away on each side of the track, literally thousands and thousands of acres of it.

What a difference a few hundred yards made in the looks of a country! But it was not simply the matter of a few hundred yards. The secret? Irrigation. The Reclamation Service of the United States Government had been busy in that region and had turned the river over the flat. Reclamation! What a word!

I have thought many, many times since, as I looked over that flat—for I afterward lived there—what a picture of life! "There is a river the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God." "Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir-tree; instead of the briar shall come up the myrtle tree; and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign, that shall not be cut off."—Fred W. Church.

BEET SUGAR MEN MUST SELL CROP AT 10 CENTS.

Steps to prevent an abnormal increase in the price of sugar because of the existing shortage were taken Tuesday by the Department of Justice.

Attorney General Palmer notified beet sugar refiners, who have been withholding their products from the market until the price situation becomes more stabilized, that the United States sugar equalization board had determined that ten cents was a fair price to be charged the wholesaler and that any charge in excess of that amount would be regarded in violation of the food-control act.

The price to the wholesaler heretofore has been nine cents, so the new price means an increase of one cent a pound.

Retailers have been allowed to charge eleven cents a pound for controlled sugar under the old prices. While the Department of Justice and the Sugar Board did not state what the new retail price would be, it was assumed that the increase would be not greater than the wholesale advance.

Judge Sidney Ballou, representing Hawaiian sugar growers, testifying at a sugar hearing before the Senate agriculture committee, denied that the Hawaiian crop had been sold to Japanese interests, as stated recently in the Senate by Senator Smoot, Republican, Utah. Virtually the entire crop, he said, had been disposed of to two big Pacific coast refiners at one-fourth of a cent less a pound than the price prevailing in New York at the time.

U. S. HOG MARKET SUFFERS BIGGEST DROP IN HISTORY.

History is without a precedent for the sensational declines in the hog markets of the United States. From a top of $23.40 per hundred weight in Kansas City on July 31 the hog market has declined to the $15 level and is still extremely weak. The market at Chicago and other centers of slaughtering of hogs averages nearly $9 per hundredweight lower than at the high time last July. It is predicted that the average cost of droves will recede to $12 and perhaps as low as $10 the coming winter. In other words, the market is expected to reach a level showing a drop of 50 to 60 per cent from the peak of prices.

Already there is a shrinkage of about $1,200 in the returns from every average carload of hogs reaching the principal markets of the United States. This shrinkage is figured on the basis of $9 per hundredweight, or $18 on each 200-pound porker. It means that hog growers are receiving less money by millions weekly for their marketings. The cost of feed has been reduced sharply, thereby offsetting the lower market in a large measure.

Consumers of the United States who are able to purchase pork chops, ham, bacon, lard and other hog products at sharply lower prices and who probably will be able to obtain even cheaper offerings later this year can thank depression in foreign exchange for the turn.

Whether or not export business will improve depends on developments in foreign exchange and in European industrial conditions. Just now the renewed embargo against Germany is restricting buying from that source.

That supplies have not increased on hog markets is clear. In the month of September, for example, the eleven leading markets, including Kansas City, Chicago, Omaha, St. Louis, St. Joseph, Sioux City, St. Paul, Indianapolis, Cleveland, Buffalo and Pittsburgh, had 1,555,000 hogs, compared with 1,566,000 in September, 1918.

While much larger supplies are expected as soon as the approaching movement of matured hogs from the 1919 spring pig crop begins, offerings are expected to show a small decrease from a year ago. Domestic consumptive conditions are favorable on the whole, but strikes of laborers who are heavy consumers of pork is not encouraging to the future.

Odorous Epidemic.

"A friend of mine has kept himself and his family immune from influenza in a district sorely smitten by eating spring onions."—Glasgow (Scotland) Evening Post.

I SAY POSITIVELY MY RHEUMATISM WAS RELIEVED BY DRECO.

Ohio citizen was crippled up so badly could not work for a long time; joints swollen, muscles sore, neck stiff.

"I say, without hesitation, that I am completely relieved of a bad case of rheumatism, and the whole credit belongs to Dreco, the new root and herb juice remedy." is the signed statement made by Mr. C. A. Wimer of Crooksville, Ohio.

"For years I've had rheumatism and have taken all the well-known treatments, baths, etc. My joints were swollen, muscles sore and drawn, my neck was stiff and very painful. At times my limbs hurt so bad that I was crippled and walked with great difficulty.

"I had taken so much strong medicine for rheumatism that my stomach was all to pieces, and it frequently filled up with gas and griped me awful bad.

"So many persons right here in town were taking Dreco that I went up and got some to give it a thorough trial, and that was the best thing I ever spent I tell you the pains are gone from my joints and muscles, I can turn my head all around and never have a pain in my neck, and I walk without the slightest inconvenience. Dreco also soothes my stomach, and it is greatly improved. I am glad to endorse this wonderful medicine that did so much for me."

The old-fashioned remedies made from roots and herbs are the best for anyone to take. Dreco is made from twelve different roots, herbs, barks and leaves. These act on the stomach, bowels, kidneys and purify the blood. Dreco knocks rheumatism out shortly; relieves catarrh of the head and stomach; makes you sleep soundly and creates a good appetite. As a blood purifier nothing can equal Dreco. It puts a stop to boils.

All good druggists now sell Dreco, and it is highly recommended in this way by

LEARN OF DEATH OF MOTHER IN FAR AWAY TURKEY AFTER TWO YEARS

Over two years following the death of his mother at their home in Turkey, Nick Pappas, of the New Manhattan restaurant, has received word of the facts from his surviving brother, who is still living in Turkey.

Mr. Pappas' surviving brother is a tailor, and located in the town where the Pappas family made their home, the city of Apollonia, in the state of Broussia, Turkey. He was forced into the Turkish army from which he was just discharged and has resumed his occupation of tailor.

The brother of whose death the local man has just learned, was Father Charles or in the Greek, Efstratios Pappas, a priest of the Greek Orthodox church. He was pastor of a Greek Catholic Church in Apollonia and on hearing that Turks were about to break into the edifice with the intent of robbing it, he locked the doors and extinguished all lights. As is the custom in that country the priest wore a long beard and the long black cassock of his order. When the Turks appeared at the window and saw Father Pappas in his black robes they were frightened and ran away. Equally frightened was the priest, who never recovered from his fright, dying a few days after of heart trouble. His mother, Mrs. Soutlon Pappas, whose husband was also a priest, but has been dead for some time, died a few months afterward, her death being brought on by the strenuous conditions in Turkey.

Father Pappas died in August, 1917, but owing to the war the surviving brother could get no word to his brother in this city, until recently. Nick Pappas himself tells an interesting if terrifying story concerning the barbarous treatment accorded Greeks, Armenians and other Christians by the Turks, who stop at no atrocities whatever. He said that on many occasions, Armenians both men and women, were taken to jail, later tied into huge sacks and at night dropped in a river whirlpool, which was of such power that nothing thrown in it ever came up. Thus, he says, thousands of innocent people were drowned.

Mr. Pappas came to this country about 8 years ago. He was employed in a grocery store in Apollonia when he received his papers calling him into the army, with fifty other boys from that town. Knowing that the Turkish soldiers were merely slaves for their superiors, he resolved not to go, but made his escape. Through the aid of his cousin, he was placed on board a small ship. With enough bread and water to last him several days, he was hidden in a small closet in the hold of the vessel, and a cargo of watermelons was piled high about him. He lived for six days and nights in this manner until the ship arrived at Constantinople.

At this city, the stowaway sought out a cousin who was employed in a large drugstore. From him he secured respectable clothes, with which he disguised himself as a Frenchman, as he had a knowledge of the French language. Through his cousin's aid he was placed aboard a French vessel and thus got safely away from Turkey. He stopped two days in Greece and again in Naples, where he boarded a liner for this country, landing at New York.

It is impossible to describe all the horrors to which Christian people are subjected in this barbarous country. And it is safe to say, that since the Turks are still undefeated, but only conquered, that they will continue to abuse Christian people until their country is wiped from the map.

Mr. Pappas is now planning to return to the old country the first of the year and hopes to bring his brother to this country with him.

Doing Fine.

Dick, whose father drives an automobile, is much interested in the operating of the car, especially the position of the gear shift lever. One day when some one asked him how his little sister, who was sick with the flu, was getting along, he replied: "O she is getting along fine; her fever was down to neutral this morning."

COUNTY TEACHERS
CAST 374 VOTES
FOR BOARD MEMBERS

Greene county teachers cast 374 votes for members of the new State Teachers' Retirement Board, according to tabulation of the vote which was taken last Friday and Saturday. Two teachers are to be elected at large to membership on the board.

W. W. McIntire, principal of the Norwood High School, Norwood, O., who worked untiringly for the passage of the pension system for teachers, received the highest number of votes cast, 83. Josephine Hammond, 8th grade teacher, Steubenville, was a close second, receiving 78 votes. Other candidates received the following votes: M. Emma Brookes, principal Barkwell school, Cleveland, 76 votes; P. C. Zenner, superintendent of schools at Mt. Vernon, 57; J. M. Collins, county superintendent of schools, Springfield, 45; H. V. Hotchkiss, superintendent Akron schools, 22; John C. Berg, county superintendent of schools, Paulding, 7; John W. Moore, county superintendent of schools, Lisbon, 6.

It is not expected that the result of the vote in the state will be announced before the end of the week.

RECEPTION GIVEN
HONORING PASTOR

A reception honoring the new pastor of the Old Town Methodist Episcopal church, and his wife, the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Simms, was given by members of the Ladies' Aid Society at the church Tuesday evening.

The evening was spent informally by about one hundred and fifty people, who were glad of the opportunity to meet personally their new pastor and his charming young wife.

During the course of the evening, a program was rendered. Two male quartettes added much to the enjoyment of the program. A double quartette and a single quartette each sang a number of selections.

Readings were given by Mrs. Alice Swadener, Miss Esther Swadener, and Miss Effie Jacoby. Miss Mabel Randall and Miss Mary Willett, each sang solos, and a piano solo was played by Kenneth Hagar. Miss Mildred Ragar gave a reading. Little Herman Swadener captivated the audience by his singing, the little fellow singing two popular selections. Frank Ginevan sang a vocal solo. The rest of the evening a Victrola furnished music.

STIRRING ADDRESSES ARE MADE AT CHAMBER COMMERCE LUNCHEON

Beecher E. Hess, chairman of the subsidiary organizations of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce delivered a stirring and instructive address on the purposes, motives and future of the Chamber of Commerce in general at the regular noon luncheon held Wednesday.

Mr. Hess compared the Chamber of Commerce with the League of Nations, only that the former is a league for service. He spoke of the value of community spirit and the get together plan, and the good that can be worked out for the community and the city, through the proper system.

The speaker also brought out the fact that this is the reconstruction period and that the Chamber of Commerce must be the leader in getting in at the beginning, readjusting business and promoting civic betterment, in order that conditions not slip back into the old order. "With an organization grouped together for the common good you can meet and solve these problems for the good of humanity and your city," he said. "We are living in an era of service to our fellow man and service to our country."

Rev. G. S. Maccaulay who acted as chairman of the meeting and who followed Mr. Hess said he would "sing his swan song, at least to the business interests of the city. He said that the Chamber of Commerce plan was simply putting into execution the Golden Rule that each individual is not living to himself alone.

The speaker also delivered a stirring appeal to the business men and women present to consider the ministers more, invite them to their conferences, and treat them as humans. "I am sorry to leave Xenia," said Rev. Maccaulay, "for I have more close friends here than any place else. I will always consider Xenia as my home city," he said.

The speaker also admired the progressive spirit of Xenia, and he made an appeal for the success of the Red Cross and the Roosevelt Memorial drives here. In closing he said "The latch string on the paragon of the Lafayette Square Presbyterian church in Baltimore, will always be hanging out to the people of Xenia. Don't think of us as Presbyterians, but as a family from your community that has moved, and at whose home you are always welcome." He finished with best wishes for the success of the Chamber of Commerce and the civic advancement of Xenia.

George W. Hanley, America City Bureau representative spoke for a few minutes on the advantages of the noon luncheon, and said that wherever he goes he will always remember the noon luncheon crowd here.

In introducing the chairman of the day, Elbert L. Babb, forum committee chairman, said that Mr. Maccaulay had chiseled for himself a niche in the heart of every man and woman in Xenia.

By popular assent the noon luncheon was made a permanent event and scheduled for Wednesday noon every week at 12 o'clock instead of 12:15. The luncheon was prepared by Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Kany.

SERIOUSLY BURNED WHEN SHE USED OIL TO START A FIRE

Mrs. Alva Keiter of the stone road was seriously burned at supper time Wednesday evening when a coal oil can with which she was starting a fire in the cook stove, exploded, igniting her clothes.

Rare presence of mind probably saved Mrs. Keiter's life. Running to a rain barrel, she thrust her head and shoulders in the water and with the water managed to extinguish her flaming skirts. She was painfully burned about the neck, arms and limbs. However, before she could extinguish her blazing clothes.

Dr. W. H. Finley was called and dressed the burns. She was doing very well Thursday.

TWO MORE SALES ARE SUCCESSFUL

A good crowd and ready buying marked the public sale held by James Soward at his home on the Lower Belbrook pike Tuesday.

The sale amounted to $6,000 milk cows selling good from $10 to $150. Grieve and Webb were auctioneers. Gazette and Republican advertising was used.

The sale of J. H. Webb and Co., held at their farm on the Spencer road between Cedarville and Jamestown, amounted to $6,600 Wednesday.

Stock at the sale sold well. Grieve and Webb and Taylor were the auctioneers and Long and Sutton, clerks. Lunch was served by the Church of Christ.

OLD-TIME COLD CURE— DRINK HOT TEA!

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time during the day or before retiring. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure a grip, as it opens the pores of the skin, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking up a cold.

Try it the next time you suffer from a cold or the grip. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore safe and harmless.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF OHIO CLASSIFICATION OF PROPERTY FOR PURPOSES OF TAXATION.

Be it resolved by the General Assembly of the State of Ohio, three-fifths of the members of each house concurring therein:

That there shall be submitted to the electors of the state for their approval or rejection at the regular election to be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1919, a proposal to amend Article XII, Section 2, of the constitution of the State of Ohio, to read as follows:

Section 2. All property shall be taxed by such rules and methods and in such classes as may be provided by law. The rules and methods shall be uniform within the classes so established. But all bonds outstanding on the first day of January, 1913, of the state of Ohio, or of any city, village, county or township in the state, of which have been issued in behalf of the public schools in Ohio and means of instruction in connection herewith shall be exempt from taxation; and burying grounds, public school houses, houses used exclusively for public worship, institutions used exclusively for charitable purposes, public property used exclusively for any public purpose, and personal property, to an amount not exceeding in value five hundred dollars, for each individual may, by general laws, be exempted from taxation; and laws may be passed to provide against the double taxation that results from the taxing of both the real estate and the mortgage of the debt secured thereby, or other lien upon it; but all such laws shall be subject to veto by the governor; and the value of all property so exempted shall, from time to time, be ascertained and published as may be directed by law.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That the required publication of the said proposed amendment shall be made and the form of the amendment shall be said election for the submission thereof shall be prepared by the secretary of state. Returns of the votes cast at said election shall be made by the proper election officials to the secretary of state, who, with the governor and the attorney general, shall open and canvass the same. If a majority of the electors voting on the amendment shall be ascertained to have voted in favor thereof, the governor shall make proclamation thereof without delay.

Looking Backwards On Efforts At Transoceanic Flight— Sacrifices Made To Cross the Pond—The Significance of the Navy's Achievement.

BY DORA SIMPKINS

OCEAN crossing by aeroplane is the sensation of the hour. The spirit of daring that has always characterized aeronautical enterprise has about reached its zenith in the achievement of the Navy plans of the United States and the heroic endeavor of Harry Hawk.

Trans-Atlantic flight has been the ambition of birdmen ever since dreams of air conquest became realities of every day life. The history of the growth of this daring desire and the perilous ventures made by men in trying to bring it to realization provide an engrossing story.

In 1900 when Count Zeppelin, whose name has since come to bear a sinister meaning for mankind, developed the first notable airship of all times and established a means of regular passenger travel, he planted a seed of speculation in the minds of all interested scientists. These seeds rapidly grew to a full grown belief in the possibility of long aerial journeys. Forthwith aviators began to try to demonstrate it.

The successes of the Zeppelin dirigible in Europe stimulated Walter Wellman, an American journalist and explorer, to make a spectacular attempt at long sustained flight. His experiment was the first trial on record to cross the Atlantic by air route.

On October 15, 1910, with Atlantic City as a starting point, Mr. Wellman set out in his dirigible, The America, on the initial trans-Atlantic flight. This airship embodied a number of new features and was a credit to its builders in originality of design and construction. It was cigar shaped. The length was 228 feet and it had a lifting capacity of 23,650 pounds. The engines and the propellers were calculated to give a speed of 26 miles an hour with both engines working, and a crossing in six days was planned. The most unique part of the equipment was a so-called equilibrator, corresponding to the drag rope of an ordinary balloon and consisting of about 80 cans of gasoline strung together to form a cable. The idea of this was to carry the fuel, which when exhausted would lessen the weight and compensate for the escaping gas of the balloon proper. It also served as a wireless ground and kept the balloon at even height.

The America drifted out to sea on the appointed date, carrying a lifeboat 27 feet long, plentifully stocked with provisions and suspended by a self-releasing hook, so that by slashing a rope it could be released instantly. The equilibrator followed the airship like a sea serpent; it pounded against the waves and made steering difficult. The weather was unfavorable. Within five hours Mr. Wellman met with a failure of the engine, which was followed by other misfortunes. The crew was forced to abandon the airship and take refuge on a passing steamer after being in the air 71 1/2 hours and sailing or drifting a distance of about 1,000 miles, in a northeast direction toward the north steamer, both of which figures were records for dirigibles.

The only aim had been to get across the Atlantic and land in Europe or even Africa, so these records—encouraging though they were—did not mitigate the disappointment of the failure of the exploit. Mr. Wellman is quoted as having said that he would make another attempt when something was found to do what he expected of the equilibrator. Mr. Melvin Vaniman, the designer of The America, admitted that the equilibrator was too heavy and placed the blame for defeat on the lack of power to drive the airship against heavy winds.

The Second Attempt

Mr. Vaniman, designer and chief engineer of The America, decided to make another attempt on his own account. He designed a new and larger airship which embodied original ideas as well as established features resulting from previous European experience. The Akron, as he named it, was built the following year with powerful engines and compared favorably with the large dirigibles of Europe. It was really the first American constructed dirigible, for Mr. Wellman's machine has been originally built in France for Arctic expeditions.

On July 2, 1917, The Akron set forth from Atlantic City on its trans-Atlantic trip, with Vaniman himself, acting as engineer. In less than one-half hour the dirigible was totally destroyed by an explosion, due to fire or other factor not definitely determined. The exact cause will always be open to conjecture because Vaniman and his crew of four went to their death. His perseverance gives him claim to be one of the martyrs of the history of air domination.

Growth Of The Trans-Atlantic Idea

By this time the aeroplane was supplanting the dirigible and establishing itself as the most effective medium of mechanical flight. Louis Blériot, the Frenchman, had crossed the English Channel in his monoplane from Barques to Dover on July 25, 1909, making the trip in 31 minutes.

The United States Government was planning to transport mail to Alaska by means of the aeroplane. The dream of magnificent airships plying across the Atlantic in the service of travel and trade, crossing in a few days by regular routes, was but another natural outgrowth from the exploits of aviators with their safe and perfect types of monoplanes and biplanes, in which they were accomplishing startling records of altitude and speed.

Small wonder that in the spring of 1913, Lord Northcliffe of the London Daily Mail offered a prize of $50,000 for the first trans-Atlantic flight from the United States, Canada or Newfoundland to Ireland or Great Britain by an aeroplane in seventy-two hours.

After six years, with a world war intervening and teaching the followers of aviation all sorts of valuable lessons, this offer exercised its magnetic appeal and tempted the daring Australian to strive to make the first non-stop flight across the Atlantic, in which he subsequently failed to the disappointment of people the world over.

Current news has supplied us with thrills regarding the latest attempts to "hop off" from North America and reach the other side. Harry Hawk with Commander Mackenzie-Grieve risked their lives in a desperate effort to be the first airmen to fly direct over the North Atlantic. But the gigantic Sopwith plane, carrying a 320 horsepower Rolls-Royce motor, now floats a wreck of the coast of some dashing wave, while the fliers are being congratulated on their lucky escape.

Successful Flight

National pride was roused by the successful feat of the NC-4 when it demonstrated its prowess in reaching the Azores and later Europe without mishap. The fact that her companion planes, the NC-1 and the NC-3 were disabled makes the success all the more notable.

The NC-4 was under command of Lieut. Com. Albert C. Read and a crew of five. Pilots, Lieut. E. F. Stone and Lieut. (junior grade) W. Hifton; radio operator, Ensign H. C. Rodd; engineer, Chief Mechanic Rhodes, and reserve engineer, Lieut. J. L. Breeze. She traveled a total of 3,900 miles in 54 hours, 16 minutes. Her final landing place being Plymouth, England, from which town in 1620 the Pilgrim Fathers sailed in their cockle-shell ship for the New World. The log follows:

Rockaway to Halifax, 540 miles, 7 hours 47 minutes actual flying time; Halifax to Trepassey, 460 miles, 8 hours 59 minutes; Trepassey to Horta, 1,200 miles, 13 hours 18 minutes; Horta to Ponta Delgada, 150 miles, 1 hour 44 minutes; Ponta Delgada to Lisbon, 800 miles, 9 hours 44 minutes; Lisbon to Ferrol, 300 miles, 3 hours 45 minutes; Ferrol to Plymouth, 450 miles, 6 hours 59 minutes.

This would make the actual flying time of the NC-4 in its record-breaking journey overseas 54 hours 16 minutes, and the distance covered 3,900 miles.

The NC-4 was built especially for the trans-Atlantic flight. It represents a wholly original American development. Designed by Rear-Admiral D. W. Taylor, Chief Constructor of the Navy, it was intended for use in putting down the submarine menace. Had the German submarines gained the upper hand in 1918, the war would still be going on and great flying boats of the type of the NC-4 would be making trips across the Atlantic to the centers of submarine activity.

America has great reason to be proud of herself during the last few years. An American explorer discovered the North Pole after explorers from other countries failed; similar instances both great and small may be cited. The present climax gives another cause for satisfaction in American achievement.

Despite the perfection of construction which the NC-4 has demonstrated, problems still arise to be solved before trans-Atlantic air routes will come to be extensively patronized by the public.

Captain Roy L. Francis, airman in charge of certain of the United States trans-Atlantic plans, said that we have not yet reached the destined goal of aeronautics by the fact that a flying boat has crossed the Atlantic aided by ships stationed at certain intervals so that the pilot cannot run out of fuel or get lost. He says, "We have yet to accomplish the safe and sane non-stop flight across the pond by aeroplanes."

Captain Francis points out that at present the heavier than air machines cannot store away sufficient gasoline to last for the trip overseas and to make the trip must be dependent on supply stations established regularly at sea.

"I don't believe this difficulty will hold us up very long," he said, "with the way they are developing airplanes in France, England, Italy and America. If it were fuel carrying space alone, we would pretty soon be in a position to popularize trans-Atlantic flight. Another great difficulty causing more trouble than fuel carrying space is the lack of accurate navigation instruments. At present there are three methods of navigating a plane on the ocean. In two of the three methods, stars, sun and moon must take the place of landmarks; the last method is by means of navigation instruments."

After pointing out that flying over the ocean necessitates a first-rate knowledge of the science of navigation, Captain Francis mentioned some of the difficulties experienced in adapting instruments of navigation to the plane. The sextant has not yet been accurately installed in airplanes; the objection to it lies in the fact that the navigator should have a clear view of the horizon while using it and this is not possible at the altitude at which trans-oceanic fliers make their trip. Directional wireless also has its drawback, for in order to supply the wireless waves ships must be stationed at certain places in the ocean, and this would be but slight improvement over having the ships there so that a plane might descend to get direction from the sailors. The combined use of the sextant and the telescope, the mechanism of which obviates the necessity of seeing the horizon, will come to be the method of navigating a plane across the ocean, according to Captain Francis.

Wind is an element of paramount importance to successful trans-Atlantic flight. In the northerly route which lays between Newfoundland and Ireland, the prevailing direction of the wind is from west to east; this factor helps aviators to the extent that they may cut three or four hours from the time that would be required to travel the same route in still air. The winds of the southerly route blow westward, making it impracticable in the present state of aircraft development to follow this route. From these facts it would appear that the most favorable trip to Europe could be made along the northern route, and that the most favorable return trip from Europe could be made by southern route.

Future Of Trans-oceanic Service

The Pacific will probably be the next ocean to conquer, and the trip across it by aeroplane can be accomplished with ships stationed at intervals to supply direction and fuel, the same as over the Atlantic.

So, looking forward, even to the time when the lighter-than-air machine makes the non-stop journey across the oceans a mere hop of twenty-four hours' duration and less, we see the oceans cease to function as obstacles to inter-continental communication at short notice.

The coasts along the oceans will come to be dotted with piers and stations. The trans-oceanic planes will be fitted with commodious buses for passengers and will be advertising for passengers to ride between New York and Liverpool, without any stopover privileges along the route whatsoever.

The future significance of the perfected trans-oceanic plane in time of war can hardly be measured at this time; but it is a formidable thought to consider the possibilities of its use for carrying high explosives and bombs.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered
Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets
Are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. For 17 years he used these tablets (a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil) in his private practice with great success.

They do all the good that calomel does but have no bad after effects. No pains, no griping, no injury to the gums or danger from acid foods—yet they stimulate the liver and bowels. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "lousy" and "heavy." Note how they clear clouded brain and perk up the spirits. 10c and 25c a box.

CUSTODY OF CHILD IS GIVEN TO THE MOTHER

The custody of seven-year-old Donald Ross was given to his young mother, Mrs. Mary Elva Hussey Ross, of Bowersville, by Judge C. H. Kyle. The court ordered Wilbur Ross, father of the child to pay $15 a week to Mrs. Ross as alimony and for the maintenance of herself and the child.

Although Judge Kyle dismissed divorce proceedings of the Ross couple, holding that they had lost their residence in Greene county through their removal to Florida last December, the hearing to establish custody of the child and for alimony and property rights continued for two days. About 25 people had been summoned for witnesses, and about three times that number of people, mainly from Bowersville, attracted by the expectation of racy testimony, crowded the court room during the trial. While those who were looking for ugly testimony were not disappointed, yet the court cut the hearing short by refusing to hear a number of witnesses.

QUIETLY WED AT ST. BRIGID'S CHURCH

The marriage of Miss Mary Ellen Rachford to Thomas Coan, jr., of Springfield, was quietly solemnized at St. Brigid's church at 6 o'clock Wednesday morning, the Rev. Albert Burke officiating.

Mrs. Katherine Buckles attended the bride as matron of honor, and Patrick Ward of Springfield was best man. The bride wore a becoming tailored suit in gray with hat to match, and Mrs. Buckles also wore a gray suit. Following the service, breakfast was served to the bridal party and near relatives of the bride at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Ellen Rachford of Cincinnati avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Coan left Xenia later for Springfield, where their apartment is ready for occupancy. Mr. Coan is a contractor in that city. He was for a time employed at the O. S. and S. O. Home, where he met his bride, who was formerly employed at the institution.

LAXATIVE for Aged People

THE BANE of old age is constipation. The bowels become weak and unable to perform their functions without aid. For this purpose only the mildest and gentlest laxative should be used. The use of harsh cathartics aggravates the trouble and makes the constipation worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are a favorite with people of middle age and older on account of their gentle action.

MAN WHO LOST HIS MEMORY WAS FOUND WORKING IN MINE

W. S. Fogle and Henry W. Jones returned to this city Monday night, bringing with them William Fogle, for three weeks missing as a result of injuries sustained about the head which resulted in pressure on the brain and temporary loss of memory.

The young man is now at the home of his father in this city and local physicians believe with proper medical treatment he will speedily regain his normal condition. His present condition is due to pressure on brain by a small blood clot which it is expected will speedily be absorbed, leaving him in possession of all his mental faculties.

When located by means of one of the circulars sent out by Mr. Jones the young man was at work in a mine where he had been employed since Oct. 1st doing blasting in the mine. It is believed that his condition is better than at first. He complains of pain in his head.—Washington Herald.

FARMERS--Attention!

The rapid introduction of farm electric plants during the past few years has brought with it the important question of service.

"SERVICE," it should be understood, means the expert attention to his electric plant which the owner may never need but which he can have on short notice if he ever requires it.

The farmer is not an electrician and he doesn't want to be one. He is experienced with machinery and he knows how to take care of it, but he also knows that the best machinery in the world sometimes needs expert attention and he wants to know that there's an experienced mechanic within reach to give his electric plant attention if it becomes necessary. In other words he expects "service."

There are these two main things to be considered in the purchase of a farm electric plant: the matter of other users' experiences.

And important—is there a local representative of the particular plant in question. If there is an established representative of a plant in the community, prompt "service," if it is ever needed, is assured. Such a representative is in a position to "take care" of his customers.

The average farmer is a good and careful buyer, and will doubtless take into consideration the things mentioned here. If he does he can be assured of enjoying continuous and dependable electric service in his home.

SANDRA THE JEALOUS

BY JANE PHELPS.

Complications. CHAPTER C.

Someway I seemed much older than Rose although really there was only a few months difference in our ages. I suppose it was being married, having a home of my own etc. So I tried to explain to her it would be impossible for her to see anything of Walter Kemp because of Everett's restrictions.

"There are other places than your house. We can lunch with him or go to a matinee, can't we? I am just dying to know him better."

"I thought Barrett Edmonds?" "Barrett is all right, he's a dear! But that Mr. Kemp is the most fascinating man I ever met. Probably that's the reason Mr. Graham objects to him. He is so much older, and so is jealous."

I came very near saying I wished Everett were jealous of me. He had forbidden me to do things, but I never had imagined it because of love or jealousy. I had in some way offended his amour propre, that was all. But I didn't say anything of this to Rose. I liked her to think that my handsome distinguished husband was jealous of me. I was like most women—jealous myself that I could not conceive of a great love where faith and trust were component parts and where jealousy had no place.

"What in the world are you thinking about, Sandra? You haven't spoken for five minutes," Rose interrupted my thoughts.

"Oh, that some people never are jealous!"

"Everybody is jealous when they care a lot for anyone," Rose retorted with all the erudition of twenty.

"Yes, I guess they are—if they care."

Fate played into Rose's hands. The very next day we stopped for some soda, and who should follow us in but Walter Kemp. He insisted on treating us, and sat beside us as we all three drank what we had ordered.

Rose acted disgracefully—yet before I was married I would not have thought so perhaps. She flirted abominably, and made what brothers called 'goo-goo eyes' at him the whole blessed time. I could see that he was attracted and my jealous nature flared up again. I knew I could not be with Walter Kemp that I could not entertain him in my home, yet I felt twinges of jealousy as I saw him turn to Rose, laugh and joke with her, admiration on his face.

Rose was right. She often used slangy expressions, but she used them in such a way they were not offensive. And no one could deny she was pretty. She had style, too, and dressed well. I was really proud of her as a guest, yet I did not want my men friends to show her more attention that they did me.

A lady I knew came into the store—a friend of Everett's. I turned to respond to her greeting, so leaving Rose and Mr. Kemp for a moment. When I turned my back to them, I saw, I had interrupted something Rose was saying which she did not want me to hear for she blushed violently. I pretended not to notice and we soon left.

As we reached the street, and Thomas drove the car up to the curb for us, I overheard Walter Kemp say: "Don't forget," and Rose smiled her answer.

About 2 o'clock that same afternoon I saw Rose going downstairs dressed for the street and looking lovely. We were going out that evening. Everett had telephoned that he had theater tickets and I had proposed we lie down a little while as we shopped all the morning and I was rather tired. Some way since my accident I tired easily.

"Why Rose, where are you going?" I asked surprised.

"Ask me no questions, I'll tell you no lies," she responded blithely.

"Do tell me! Do you want me to go with you? Shall I order the car for you?"

"No, to both! There's a taxi at the door for me and I am going to tea with Walter Kemp. I didn't tell him to ask you too. I thought after what you had said—about Mr. Graham not liking him, it was better to go without you. I'll be back in time to dress for dinner.

I looked from the window and as she tripped down the steps to the waiting taxi hot tears filled my eyes. "I was always the one left," I thought as I brushed them away.

BELLBROOK

Theodore Pepper received word Monday that his mother, Mrs. Martha Pepper, who lives with her daughter, Mrs. Anna Hartsock of near Waynesville, had suffered a stroke of paralysis.

One of the "Old Boys"—a man probably 50 years of age, walked into "Dick" Wright's place Sunday night, and in unmistakable tones of clean-cut English, called for a "stick of Licorice-root." A bunch of youngsters ranging in age from 15 to 21, began sizing the would-be-purchaser up. After his departure, the following dialogue ensued:

Mrs. James DeSilva, (nee Mary Edwards) was buried in Bellbrook cemetery, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Turner, of Springfield, spent Saturday and Sunday with near relatives in and around town.

It is reported that Charles Cramer has purchased a pool-room in Dayton, and will turn his attention to that business in a short time.

Al Miller paid his parents near Medway a visit Sunday.

Mrs. Homer Russell of near Ferry, is spending a few days with her mother and sister, Mrs. Rilla and Miss Elsie Surface.
